public, according to the existing book building method.

The securities regulator made the system mandatory for the premium seekers to ensure accountability and responsibility of issuer companies, issue managers, auditors and other stakeholders.

In January 2018, the securities regulator also brought change in rules regarding conduct of eligible investors (EIs) while taking part in price bidding process of book building method.

Recently, the BSEC Chairman M Khairul Hossain hinted that some changes to the definition of institutional investors are being planned to ensure the transparency of the book building system.

He said also made harsh remarks on the price manipulation by alleged institutional investors in book-building method, saying the book building system would be suspended or stopped if needed for the sake of capital market.

Mr Hossain also warned errant institutional investors, including brokers, dealers, merchant bankers and asset management companies, saying they will be excluded from the list of institutional investors.

At Tuesday's meeting, the securities regulator also decided to bring necessary changes in the notification dated October 02, 2011 regarding fund raising by the un-listed companies.

The BSEC has decided to form a four-member committee headed by BSEC Executive Director Mahbubul Alam.

The committee will recommend necessary changes after reviewing the notification, said the statement.

Sources said the BSEC committee might review the notification regarding increasing the lock-in period on the trading of placement shares from the existing one year.
